

Melinda Means is an author, speaker, and mom blogger, as well as women's ministry director at her church. She has been a freelance writer since her daughter was an infant, writing primarily for healthcare publications until several years ago, when her writing focus took a maternal turn. Her children were simply providing too much humbling and hilarious material to let it go to waste. Her work has appeared in Focus on the Family publications, CBN.com, In Touchmagazine, and Lifeway's Journey magazine.

She and husband Mike, a high school teacher, are parents to two highly entertaining teenage children, a daughter and a son. She has been a freelance writer since her daughter was an infant, writing primarily for healthcare publications until several years ago, when her writing focus took a maternal turn. Her children were simply providing too much humbling and hilarious material to let it go to waste.

Her work has appeared in Focus on the Family publications, CBN.com, In Touch magazine, and Lifeway's Journey magazine. She and husband Mike, a high school teacher, are parents to two highly entertaining teenage children, a daughter and a son.